OJO CALIENTE HOT SPRINGS.

These celebrated Hot Springs are located in the midst of the Ancient Cliff Dwellings, twenty-five miles west of Taos, and fifty miles north of Santa Fe, and about twelve miles from Baranco Station, on the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, from which point a daily line of stages runs to the springs.
The temperature of these waters is from 90 to 122 degrees. The gases are carbonic. Altitude 6,000 feet. Climate very dry, and delightful the year round. There is now a commodious hotel for the convenience of invalids, and tourists. People suffering with consumption, cancer, and other contagious diseases, are not accepted.
These waters contain 1,686.24 grains of alkaline salts to the gallon, being the richest alkaline Hot Springs in the world. The efficiency of these waters has been thoroughly tested by the miraculous cures attested to in the following diseases: Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Malaria, Bright's disease of the Kidneys, Syphilis and Mercurial Affections, Scrofula, Catarrh La Grippe, all Female Complaints, etc.

etc. Board, lodging and bathing $2.50 per day; $15 per week; $50 per month. Stage meets Denver trains and waits for Santa Fe train upon request. This resort is attractive at all seasons and is open all winter. Passengers for Ojo Caliente can leave Santa Fe at 9 a. m., and reach Ojo Caliente at 4 p. m., the same day.

Watch the kidney secretions. See that they have the amber hue of health; the discharges not excessive will do this for you. They watch the kidneys and cure them when they're sick.

Tomas Baca, living on Cerrillos Street, Santa Fe, N. M., says: "Five years ago Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at Ireland's Pharmacy brought me such great relief that I was pleased to tell people of Santa Fe what means to employ if they suffer from backache or any of the troubles which arise from weak or inactive kidneys. Prior to using Doan's Kidney Pills backache was a source of much annoyance to me and had been off and on for about three years.
Though I was never laid up on account of it, I worked just the same days when I did not feel fit or able to.
One box of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me and I was well for six months but hard labor in the mine brought on a return of the trouble and this attack, like others that have occurred, was quickly and thoroughly dispelled by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. I have no desire to retract anything stated in my original endorsement and I would like it understood that I still as heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as when they first came to my notice."

MARCH OF THE CROSS THROUGH THE SOUTHWESTERN DESERT

Uncounted volumes have been written concerning the picturesque old Spanish missions of California, but the monuments of a similar character that remain to tell of the zeal of the early Franciscan fathers in New Mexico are little known. It is true that these are less imposing than those of the Coast, but they are from one to two centuries older; and they are eloquent memorials of quiet heroism, of unfailing zeal and devotion, and often of martyrdom such as is paralleled nowhere else in America.

Long years before the Pilgrim Fathers listened to the first sermon ever preached upon the shores of New England, the gray-clad friars were preaching to copper-hued congregations in the very heart of the continent. The old Conquistadores ever carried the sword in one hand and the cross in the other. The priest marched shoulder to shoulder with the men at arms. When the soldier's work was done, he passed on, but the priest remained—mayhap to fill a martyr's grave.

The first representative of European civilization to behold the strange cities of the Pueblo Indians was a priest—Friar Marcos de Niza, in 1539. When Coronado made his unparalleled journey of exploration from Mexico to Kansas, in 1540 and 1541, he was accompanied by three missionaries of the Franciscan order. One of these, Padre Juan de Padilla, returned to settlers. Civilized Indians from Mexico were colonized at the missions, and to these was entrusted the duty of imparting instruction in such European arts, crafts and trades as they themselves had acquired. With the party went cattle, sheep, swine, grain, seeds, fruit trees, agricultural implements and household utensils. The ordinary procedure in New Mexico was a little different in that the missionary usually went alone, unguarded and without assistance. Single handed he undertook the large task of winning his flock from paganism, teaching them Christianity, and introducing the crafts and the crops of civilized lands.

Often the soldiers and settlers followed him, but never in sufficient numbers to guarantee protection.

The mission, thus became a great school in which many things besides religion were taught. The system was admirably conceived in many respects, but like every human institution it had its faults. After the establishment of the military power, conflicts of authority between the priests and the military authorities became common, and did not enhance the prestige of either, in the eyes of the Indians.

The first church ever erected in New Mexico was built at San Gabriel, where Juan de Onate founded the capital of the new province in 1595, near the present site of Chamita. In 1605 the settlement was moved to Santa Fe. Not another town was minister to the spiritual needs of the nomadic tribes of the plains, and in 1543 suffered the fate of martyrdom near the spot where Kansas City now stands. There is a legend, widely current among the Indians of the Southwest, that the men of Isleta, a thousand miles away, in the valley of the Rio Grande, heard of the death of man of God, made the long journey to the scene of his martyrdom, laboriously carried the body to their distant pueblo and there buried it. Then when a missionary arrived among them and a church was built, the body was lifted and reinterred within the church.

Some years ago, an attempt was made to either prove or disprove the truth of the legend by searching for the body of the priest. A body was found, in a fair state of preservation, interred in a coffin made from a huge log, and wrapped in crumbling fragments of such materials as were used in the habits of the Franciscans in the days of the Conquistadores. Whether the body was truly that of Padre Padilla, or of some later and forgotten priest, built in New Mexico until after the Pueblo rebellion of 1692. The second was Santa Cruz, established in 1695, not many miles from the old San Gabriel settlement. Eleven years later, the third Spanish town in New Mexico was founded at Albuquerque, in 1706.

However, if Spanish settlements were those few and between, practically every Pueblo Indian village was the seat of a Spanish missionary enterprise, and a center of Spanish civilization. According to Charles F. Lummis, in 1617, three years before the landing of the Mayflower, there were eleven churches in the territory—the largest at Pecos, on the East, and another at Galisteo; one at Santa Fe, the capital; one 80 miles north, at Taos; two at Jemez, in the heart of an appalling wilderness that even yet remains unsubdued, and others in nearly all the larger Pueblo settlements. At Zuni, 300 miles from Santa Fe, the missionaries had established themselves at least as early as 1629, and along the same period two missions were started among the Moh. In 1629, probably never will be ascertained.

The first great object of Spanish ambition was to find gold. The second was to save the souls of the natives.
As soon as the early explorers became convinced that there was no gold worth while in the Southwest, the founding of missions became their chief labor; and for at least 200 years the history of New Mexico and Arizona is mainly a history of missions.
In California and most of the possessions of Spain in America, when a mission was to be established, along with the missionaries went a party of soldiers to erect a presidio, or garrison house, as the nucleus of a settlement.
These soldiers took their families along with them and became perma-

Fray Juan Ramirez, the apostle of the Acomas, walked to that city on the cliff. He was received with a storm of arrows. The legend states that he was thrown from the summit of the cliff, but was miraculously saved from death by the spreading of his robes, which upheld him like a parachute. In the same active year of 1629, a church was built at San Antonio and another at Socorro. In 1630 or 1632, a mission was built at Picuris, 35 miles south of Taos, and one at Isleta, 13 miles from Albuquerque.

According to Benavides' memorial to the King of Spain, in 1630 there were 25 churches in New Mexico, with Many Sleepless Nights, Owing to a Persistent Cough. Relief Found at Last.

"For several winters past my wife has been troubled with a most persistent and disagreeable cough, which invariably extended over a period of several weeks and caused her many sleepless nights," writes Will J. Hayner, editor of the Burley, Colo., Bulletin. "Various remedies were tried each year, with no beneficial results.
In November last the cough again put in an appearance and my wife, acting on the suggestion of a friend, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The result was indeed marvelous. After three doses the cough entirely disappeared and has not manifested itself since." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.
